This class is primarily going to be presentation based, but I will probably ask people to do a report or two. Presentations will be on the whiteboard and without slides. Students will take turns presenting. The students should decide what they want to present, but it should be at least tangentially related to economic theory and interesting as well. I attach a brief list of papers that I find interesting (or potentially interesting), you can also find other papers online, at conference websites, or on webpages of well-known theorists.
